ANOTHER WORD FROM A PROGRESSIVE

In this crisis I am supporting the Republican ticket because I believe the foundation of the Republican party to be such that I should support it.

As Lincoln said, this government is and must be a government of the people, for the people, and by the people. During the crisis, the United States should have a government of sufficient stability, and of sufficient virility, so that at all times it shall mean something to be an American.

I am proud to be an American, and I want it to mean something. I don't want the American age and American diplomacy to be a joke among the other nations of the earth. And so far as Progressivism is concerned, I look upon it as an ideal and tendency, rather than an organization.

The formation of the Progressive Party was really a domestic affair. The party was formed because this country had reached the time to clean up the house. While we had the house-cleaning under way, a world-wide conflict shook the foundation of the house itself.

If we are now to take our destined place among the nations of the world, the loyalty and the desire for service on the part of the average man in America must be aroused. We don't want it to be aroused by a terrible national catastrophe and the ruin involved. And so primarily, I am supporting the Republican national ticket because its foundation is right. I am frank to say that I do not regard all the details as yet right.

We have been house-cleaning, and now are going to fix the foundation and then go on with the house-cleaning.

In Maine we had a Republican victory—not what it should have been, because we did not begin in time to conserve the liberal element. Colonel Roosevelt's coming into the state, followed by the Republican candidate for President, aroused enthusiasm, and got out a tremendous vote. Men forgot the petty issues; forgot factionalism; forgot local issues; and voted on straight-out national lines.

In short, the Maine election epitomized the need of a national point of view as the dominant need and issue in this campaign. Upon it depends the soundness of America and American policy in the critical years before us.

It is comparatively useless to put in new electric light fixtures, to paper and paint the house, or be liberal with interior decorations at a time when the foundation of the building is going out from under it. —Halbert P. Gardner, Maine.

EAST END SPEEDWAY

As was predicted with the building of the improved street through the East End of our city, very little attention would be paid to the speed limit for vehicles. While East Second street is only partially completed as far as Union street, allowing approximately two-thirds of the total width for vehicles and street cars, rendering at times a very congested condition. On several occasions within the past few days, automobiles have far exceeded the speed limit prescribed by Council. While we admit this section is very tempting to the average driver for a spin, and in most cases it is not done with the intention of violating the city ordinance, it is very dangerous and should be stopped. The good people of the East End are certainly entitled to some protection in this matter. While they are averse to reporting violation of the ordinance, this will have to be done if the practice continues. As an extra precaution we would suggest the placing of warning signs along this and other streets, giving the speed limit and the penalty for exceeding it. If this is not done the life of some one will be the price.

NEW YORK LETTER

(From Our Regular Correspondent)

Gold Bricks.—There was indignation in Democratic circles when your correspondent issued a warning to farmers against their funds in the wildcat bank schemes being formed under the Federal Farm Loan Act, and intimations that the warning was prompted by partisan prejudice; but it was a very real evil and the warning timely, as is now proved by the fact that the extent of the evil has compelled the Federal Farm Loan Board to issue from Washington a similar warning. Stock is being sold to farmers which amounts to little more than gold bricks. It is being sold in farm banks "when and if organized" and the board says that the "lfs" will in most instances probably turn to "won't mes." The other scheme, to which attention was called in this correspondence, has not yet been touched upon by the Board. It is a scheme whereby promoters sell stock to farmers in banks which have been approved by the Board, but sell it at twice the par value with a guarantee that the excess over par "less the cost of organization" will constitute the bank's surplus. Of course, this gives the promoters opportunity to appropriate to themselves, as "cost of organization" a sum equal to the total capital of the bank.

Federal Reserve Law.—Addressing the Bankers' Convention, Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, said, "We all frankly understand why practically no bank has voluntarily subjected itself to the action of the Federal Reserve Law. It is no secret why state banks decline to become members of the Federal Reserve system. They are apprehensive of the sort of regulation which has recently been imposed upon national banks. They are not desirous of subjecting themselves to the sort of autocratic supervision under which the whole national banking system has grown restive. Had I chosen to discuss the Federal Reserve Act, I would have reached a conclusion that it embodies sound, fundamental principles too valuable, indeed to our financial life to be abandoned; the free working of which, however, has been entangled and hampered in its inception by political considerations and administrative attitude to such an extent as to endanger the success of what should rightly be the most important step ever taken in American banking." Mr. Vanderlip's words were enthusiastically received. The Nomenclature of the Federal Reserve act, is of course, Comptroller John Williams, with his protector Crown Prince McAdoo.

Impudent Miners.—Impudent and presumptuous American citizens who have gone into Mexico, risking their lives and their capital, and in many instances the lives of their families, have had the presumption to disturb the serene and friendly proceedings of the Mexican conference by thrusting before it a record of Carranza's depredations, his confiscations and other outrages on Americans and their property interests. They actually demanded protection of life and property; provision for transportation of their products and foodstuffs and taxes which are neither prohibitive nor confiscatory. And they had the temerity to admit that they represented investments in Mexico amounting to upwards of $250,000,000. What they expected to accomplish by such rude interruption and such a confession it is difficult to conceive in view of the fact that all Americans of their class have been informed by the State Department, during this administration, that they are more adventures, unpatriotically seeking to make money outside of their own country. Indeed, only last Saturday President Wilson referred to them as evildoers so base that they desire "that kind of law and order which some investors in Mexico consider most to their advantage."

This is certainly an ungrateful world. As soon as a feller dies, the relatives all rush to the newspapers and put in a card of thanks.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.
